Climate change is a complex global issue demanding innovative solutions. A vast array of stakeholders – large and small, public and private – are turning their attention to new approaches to securing a greener future. The challenge lies in developing sound measures that not only capitalize on new market mechanisms and sources of revenues (such as carbon credits), but also optimally engage key players, including government, industry, and civil society.

We navigate the critical issues to deliver tailored solutions

At GCA, we help key decision-makers understand and navigate the challenges and opportunities. We are trusted advisors in arriving at tailored, innovative solutions. Our creative approach addresses client needs by identifying key issues, applying international best practices, and leveraging our extensive public and private sector relationships around the world to provide advice that is independent, critical, informed, and objective.

Our advisory services include both policy and programme advice, as well as project advisory services, including business plan preparation.
